

Dianne Burke Brief Bio:

Dianne Burke is a cybersecurity faculty member at the University of Montana and serves as Director of CyberMontana. She has taught networking, security, data operations, and computer forensics courses in both the public and private sectors. She recently completed a career as a forensic analyst where she specialized in Electronically Stored Information (ESI) collection and analysis, assisting counsel in cases across the U. S.

Ms. Burke holds a B. A. from Rice University, and M. S. from the University of Houston, an M. Ed. From the University of Montana, and is a doctoral student at the University of Montana.